INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

This book had its beginnings in the notes made by myself in my efforts to supply documents called for by researchers in the early days of the division in 1913. Public documents work was a new field to me, and I found myself telling the researchers that I had not publications which were really on hand but not in the form in which I had expected to find them. As my knowledge of public documents increased it was found that the Philippine Government publications were very inadequately represented on our shelves, and a research was begun to ascertain what had been printed in order to secure as complete a file as possible. The notes made from time to time in this research were preserved and were used for this work. It is believed that the list is a nearly complete one. In this research the Checklist of United States Public Documents 1789-1909, Vol. 1, List, the Monthly list of State Publications, the U. S. Document Catalogue, and other books were invaluable aids.

The Checklist of United States Public Documents, 1789-1909, 3d edition, coming into my hands some time after my research had begun, has had, it will be noted, a strong influence on my work, but the confines of my book are not so closely limited to a checklist.

The term "public document" is confined to publications printed at government expense. Note is made of the few publications listed which do not come under the term used in the above sense with the exception of the reports of the military governor, the Philippine commissions and a few other publications which were printed in Washington, D. C. No publication is listed for which there is not definite authority. A few for which some needed information is lacking but of which there is no doubt as to their having actually been printed are included but listed apart from the bureau to which they are supposed to belong.

Circulars and bulletins, etc., which are executed by a manifold process have been entered if they are a part of a printed series.

A few reprints which have title covers have been listed under General Publications.

Dr. James A. Robertson, former Librarian of the Philippine Library, who generously gave me the notes he had made at an earlier time in a similar research, and Mr. Enrique V. Filamor, Chief of the Legislative Reference Division, have given me their full support. Miss Syrena McKee, Chief Cataloguer, helped me over many a hard place. The bureaus and offices of the government have coöperated heartily, and special assistance was given me in the assembling of the publications by Miss Mary Polk, Librarian of the Bureau of Science; Mr. J. B. Morton, of the Executive Bureau; and Mr. Martin P. De Veyra, of the Library of the Philippine Assembly. Mr. Gaudencio Banting and Mr. Eustaquio G. Aquino, of my division, have been constant and alert in their support and assistance. To all these, and to Mr. Conrado Benitez of the University of the Philippines, I owe much, and my debt to them is here gratefully acknowledged.

EMMA O. ELMER.

LAWS, STATUTES, ETC.

The instructions of the President of the United States to the Philippine Commission vested in the Philippine Commission the legislative functions of the government of the Philippine Islands beginning September 1, 1900, to the establishment of the civil central government or until Congress otherwise provided.¹ From September 1, 1900, to the convening of the Philippine Legislature, October 16, 1907, the Philippine Commission, exercising this exclusive power of legislation passed Acts 1-1800. Later acts have been enacted by the Philippine Legislature, consisting of the Philippine Commission, the upper house, and the Philippine Assembly, the lower house, and by the Philippine Commission exercising its exclusive general legislative jurisdiction over that part of the Philippine Islands inhabited by Moros and other non-Christian tribes. Act of Congress of August 29, 1916, creates a Legislature to consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives in which is vested the general legislative powers of the former Legislature and Philippine Commission. Each law is first published in two languages, English and Spanish, in loose leaf form. Later they are printed collectively in various forms and arrangements in one or both languages. The loose leaf laws are not recorded here.

PHILIPPINE COMMISSION, 1899-1900.

[SCHURMAN COMMISSION.]

In January, 1899, President McKinley appointed a civil commission (not a peace commission as it is often called) to investigate the conditions of the Philippine Islands with the establishment of civil and peaceful government under American authority in view. The Commission received the instructions of the President in January, 1899, sailed from America the latter part of that month and reached Manila March 4, 1899. The final volumes of the Commission's report were submitted December 20, 1900, and printed in 1901.

REPORTS.

LEGISLATIVE.

PHILIPPINE COMMISSION, 1900-1916.

[TAFT COMMISSION.]

The Philippine Commission, 1900-1916, was appointed by the President of the United States in March, 1900, and was placed under the control of the War Department. Under the instructions of the President, dated April 7, 1900, the legislative, and some executive, authority was transferred to the Commission on September 1, 1900, the military governor remaining the chief executive. Under executive order of June 21, 1901, the executive authority in all civil affairs theretofore vested in the military governor and in the Philippine Commission was transferred to a civil governor on July 4, 1901, the military governor continuing to exercise authority in all territory not fully organized for civil government until July 4, 1902.

Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, approved and ratified the President's action in creating the Philippine Commission and the Office of Civil Governor, and temporarily provides for administration of civil affairs in the Philippine Islands.

In accordance with the organic act of Congress of July 1, 1902, the Philippine Commission passed Act No. 1582, enacted January 9, 1907, to provide for the holding of elections in the Philippine Islands for the organization of the Philippine Assembly, and for other purposes. The Legislature, of which the Assembly was the lower house, convened on October 16, 1907, and exercised the legislative powers theretofore conferred on the Philippine Commission in all that part of the Philippine Islands not inhabited by Moros or other non-Christian tribes. The Philippine Commission was the upper house of the Legislature. In its capacity as a commission, the Philippine Commission continued to exercise exclusive general jurisdiction over the parts of the Philippine Islands inhabited by the Moros or other non-Christian tribes. Act of Congress of August 29, 1916, creates a Philippine Legislature consisting of a senate and a house of representatives, which exercises the legislative powers of the former legislature and the exclusive legislative jurisdiction and authority of the Philippine Commission. Under the provisions of Act of Congress of August 29, 1916, the Philippine Commission ceased to exist when the Fourth Philippine Legislature, 1st session, convened on October 16, 1916.

PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE, 1907-1916.

The Philippine Legislature was authorized by Act of Congress approved July 1, 1902. It was vested with all the legislative power theretofore conferred on the Philippine Commission in that part of the Islands not inhabited by Moros or other non-Christian tribes.

The Philippine Legislature consisting of two houses, the Philippine Commission, the upper house, and the Philippine Assembly, the lower house, convened Oct. 16, 1907. Act of Congress approved August 29, 1916, created a Philippine Legislature, consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives, which exercises the legislative powers of the former legislature and the exclusive legislative jurisdiction and authority of the Philippine Commission.

GENERAL PUBLICATIONS.

None issued.

ACTS.

Note.—The acts of the Philippine Legislature and of the Philippine Commission exercising its exclusive legislative jurisdiction are numbered consecutively and are placed under Laws, statutes, etc.

PHILIPPINE COMMISSION.

In accordance with the Organic Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, the Philippine Commission passed Act No. 1582, enacted January 9, 1907, to provide for the holding of elections in the Philippine Islands for the organization of the Philippine Assembly, the lower house of the Philippine Legislature, and for other purposes. The Philippine Commission is the upper house of the Legislature. In its capacity as a Commission, the Philippine Commission continued to exercise exclusive general jurisdiction over the parts of the Philippine Islands inhabited by the Moros or other non-Christian tribes. Under the provisions of Act of Congress of August 29, 1916, the Philippine Commission ceased to exist when the Fourth Philippine Legislature, first session, convened October 16, 1916.

NOTE.—All publications of the Philippine Commission, as a separate body and as the upper house of the Philippine Legislature, are listed under Philippine Commission, 1900–1916.

PHILIPPINE ASSEMBLY.

Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, provided for a legislature to consist of the Philippine Commission, the upper house, and the Philippine Assembly, the lower house. In accordance with this organic act, the Philippine Commission enacted Act No. 1582 on January 9, 1907, to provide for the holding of elections for the organization of the Philippine Assembly. Act of Congress approved August 29, 1916, creates a Philippine Legislature consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives, the Philippine Commission being abolished and the Assembly, in part, continuing as the House of Representatives.

EXECUTIVE.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL, CIVIL GOVERNOR, AND MILITARY GOVERNOR.

The central government of the Islands was established September 1, 1900, under the instructions of the President with a military governor as the chief executive and the Commission as the legislative body with certain executive duties. It continued in this way until July 4, 1901, when Executive Order of the President of the United States, under date of June 21, 1901, transferred the executive authority over all the organized provinces theretofore reposed in the military governor and in the Commission to a civil governor. The government continued partially under the military governor until July 4, 1902, when the Office of Military Governor was abolished and the civil governor assumed entire executive control of the Philippine Islands. The title of Civil Governor was changed to Governor-General by Act of Congress, February 6, 1905.

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL (CIVIL GOVERNOR), AND THE MILITARY GOVERNOR.

BUREAU OF AUDITS.

[Office of the Auditor.]

General order No. 3, of the Military Governor, September 5, 1898, designated an auditor for the Philippine Islands. The office of auditor for the Islands was created by an order of the President under date of May 8, 1899. This order was amended by Act No. 90 of the Philippine Commission, enacted February 28, 1901. Act No. 90 was repealed by Act No. 1402, enacted October 10, 1905. Act No. 222 enacted September 6, 1901, placed the Bureau of the Insular Auditor under the executive control of the Department of Finance and Justice where it remained until July 1, 1907, when it was transferred by Act No. 1679 to the executive control and supervision of the Governor-General. The name, Bureau of Audits, is used in Act No. 1402 and in reorganization Act No. 1407, effective November 1, 1905.

Under act of Congress of August 29, 1916, the bureau remains under the general supervision of the Governor-General.
